

Unit 6: Coherence

Handout 2: Three points to sequence

Multiplication is distributive: multiplication facts can be derived from related known facts; two-part problems that involve addition/subtraction of products with a common factor can be efficiently solved by applying the distributive law.

The distributive law can be used to derive multiplication facts beyond known times tables.

Multiplication is commutative; division is not commutative.